

November 1, 2012

Dear Sir/Madame:

A few years ago I decided to hire EnviroForensics to take over as my environmental consultant to direct and perform environmental investigation and cleanup on three of my dry cleaning plants. EnviroForensics explained to me that I could use my old general liability insurance policies written before 1985 to fund the environmental work. These policies have not only paid for my environmental cleanup but they have also covered most of my attorney's fees, all the while keeping me eligible in the DERF program.

The people at EnviroForensics have done everything that they said they would do and more. The team at EnviroForensics pulled together my historical insurance information and worked with me to develop a strategy to use those old policies to pay for the investigation and remediations of the environmental impacts on all three of my dry cleaning sites. It sounded too good to be true, but true to their word I have spent very little out-of-pocket and my dry cleaners are on the way to being contaminant free properties.

Remediating chlorinated solvents in soil and groundwater is a long process but I look forward to the value of my business being restored to fair market value. If I have any regrets, it is only that I wish I would have hired EnviroForensics sooner.

I can't say enough good things about EnviroForensics. The employees are knowledgeable, courteous and helpful and I know that I am taken care of by experts. I strongly recommend EnviroForensics if you are looking at remediating your property and restoring its value.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Dan Martino Sr".

Dan Martino, Sr.